- 25X1 1. The Soviet supply depot, [redacted] at Erfurt-Marbach, consisted of the former Erfurt Getreidesilo on the south side of Marbacher Strasse, the cold-storage building on Schlachthofstrasse, Nos 26 and 27 Nordhaeuser Strasse, and the Martin villa at 12 Marbacher Strasse which housed offices and quarters for the Soviet personnel.
2. The superior headquarters of the Erfurt supply depot is located in [redacted]. Major General Kolonichenko (fnu) who inspects the depot at long intervals belongs to this headquarters. There are also connections between the depot and the Erfurt town komendatura. A courier carries mail to Berlin-Karlshorst twice a month.
3. The unit operating the depot numbered about 120 men including 10 to 15 uniformed officers, some of whom were administrative officers, 1 veterinary surgeon and 1 paymaster; 10 to 15 Soviet civilians, some of them with army rank; about 55 IM and NCOs; and 40 soldiers, about 20 years of age, who were in their second or third year of service and were employed as guard unit. Prior to 13 July, the guard unit consisted of only 21 men. Lieutenant Colonel Vasili Shevchenko (fnu), who wore red-bordered golden epaulets with artillery insignia commanded the unit. [redacted] Shevchenko is of Jewish descent from the immediate vicinity of Moscow and was billeted in the Martin villa. [redacted] Other uniformed officers included: Captain Vasil Poteshin who wore red-bordered golden epaulets and was the chief of the coldstorage building; Captain Zasha Holotnak (fnu) who wore red-bordered silver epaulets with intendance insignia; Captain Andrei Okanev, who wore red-bordered silver epaulets with intendance insignia; and Senior Lieutenant Dimitrov Kunitsov who wore red-bordered golden epaulets with artillery insignia. Most of the other officers wore red-bordered silver epaulets with intendance insignia. They were billeted in the buildings with the offices on Nordhaeuser Strasse and in the Martin villa. They alternated their work between the offices and the supply depot. In addition, two Germans were permanently employed there as interpreters and workers. A large number of German workers had been discharged a long time ago.

Building 5:

hay, about 20 German and Russian horses, horse-drawn vehicles and coaches.

Cold-storage house on Schlechthofstrasse: Frozen beef and butter.

5. The stocks are continually replenished by shipments arriving by rail on the spur track leading through the depot. The cars are sealed and guarded by Soviet soldiers and Volkspolizei and are usually unloaded at night. The stocks at the depot included: flour from East Germany including some from the Soviet mills at Woltersdorf near Arnstadt, Turzen, Weisendorf and Riesa; cereals from East Germany including Riesa; sugar from East Germany including Gositz, Thuringia; Polish sausage; rice, tea and spices from an army supply depot in Moscow-West; tobacco from the U.S.S.R.; cigarettes from East Germany, including some from the Mahalesi cigarette factory and Papyros factory in Dresden; vodka from Moscow and Nordhausen; coffee and canned goods from undetermined locations; and other ration supplies from East Germany.

6. Shipments which arrived by rail on 21 July 1952 included:

3 boxcarloads with 54 emergency rations, the first to arrive at the depot. They were packed in cellophane paper and consisted of 2 cans, sliced bread and another package with undetermined contents. Twenty-five rations were in a wooden box which bore the inscription Leningrad. The rations were good until 1955.
2 boxcarloads with 30 tons of type-405 wheat flour;
3 boxcarloads with 60 tons of semolina from Riesa;
1 boxcarload with 10 tons of Russian tea and spices from the army supply depot Moscow-West.

7. The depot supplied Soviet units in Thuringia, presently in all of Thuringia. However, units at the Ohrdruf-Crawinkel, the Wechterstedt troop training grounds near Eisenach, in Gotha, the Kommandatura in Arnstadt and Hinderleben airfield were known individually. About 150 tons of ration supplies, without frozen meat, were delivered to the individual units per month. Ration supplies for 10 days were usually picked up by one truck per company, with each company having an average strength of 160 men. Supply sergeants would show a delivery order of their troop unit and would then be issued the supply which was handled by a loading detail. Centries checked the papers of all truck drivers.

1. [redacted] Comment. Major General Kolonichenko (fnu) possibly is I.S. Kolesnichenko who, as 3d's brigade general, was chief of the SCC Land Thuringia at the end of 1949. In March 1950, he was reported [redacted] to have been chief of a military office in Weimar. According to an edition of the Telegraf newspaper of 8 June 1950 in Berlin, Kolesnichenko was replaced by a civilian. It is conceivable that he was assigned to an office in the headquarters of the Rear Services of the Eighth Gds Army. In records of December 1948, one Lieutenant Colonel Shevchenko (fnu) was mentioned as deputy commander in charge of administrative affairs with the 117th Gds Itz Rifle Regt of the 39th Gds Rifle Div. It cannot be determined whether this Shevchenko is identical with the Shevchenko mentioned in the report. A 7th Itz Inf Regt is carried stationed in Thuringia.

3. [redacted] Comment. [redacted] the ration supply depot of the Eighth Gds Army in Erfurt-Morbach. [redacted] The statements regarding the subordination of the depot are believed correct. The report indicates that about 1,000 tons of food were stored at the installation. This figure does not include the stocks of meat in the cold-storage house in Erfurt. The data on the origin of the supplies again confirms the fact that the Soviet Army draws its supplies almost exclusively from East Germany. Most of the units drawing supplies belong to elements of the Eighth Gds Army. The buildings are keyed to sketch attached as Annex.
